Talked Politics.

It is difficult to stop when started upon the personality of the crowd in the great building last night, ostensibly to watch the performances in the arena. I am not denying that the horse is king in Richmond this week, but I am certain that many in the Auditorium last night thought and talked of many things other than horsefiesh. For there were politicians there galore, and men high up in the world of business, and young men and fair women, who sat side by side, the music rising and falling on the air as they looked into each who sat side by side, the music rising and who sat side by side, the music rising and falling on the air as they looked into each other's eyes, the fragrance of roses in their nostrils and the carelessnoss of youth in their hearts. Who shall say that these talked only, or chiefly, of the

EVENTS IN DETAIL

The Story of the Equine Winners is Picturesquely Told.

The Story of the Equine Winners is Picturesqueiy Told.

The big amplitheatre was rapidly filling up with people, and its interior, gay with bunting and respiendent with a myriad of electric lights, was fast becoming even gayer with the bewitching gowns of fair women, when the bugie called the first class into the tanbark arena. Each led by a long rein, there praneed into the ring a haif dozen stallions, as if they spurned the ground upon which they tred. Job's word picture of the war horse was brought vividly to mind as the proud creatures were shown around the ring, scorning almost to touch the earth.

The class was open to hackneys, theroughereds, trotting, coach and pony stallions, and the miscellaneous collection entered gave the judges a difficult task. Each was a good representative of his class, but it is difficult to judge a small peny beside a horse rising sixteen hands, or to determine the relative merits of a hackney and a trotting stallion. The blue ribbon was awarded Mrs. John Gerken's Brandon, a cheshut hackney stallion, with very high knee and hock action and of perfect conformation. He was the most showy horse in the ring, and his selection for the first honor met with the approval by prolonged clapping.

With a promptness that made the Marine Band realize that when horses were about they must play second fiddle, the bugler sounded the call for the second class of the evening, that for horses and runabouts. There were ten entries, and they were all of the highest class. The handling of them, too, was magnificent, and some of the best whips in the whole country held the ribbons over the beauties, which, according to the specifications, should have true all-around action and ability to go a pace. All ten seemed to come up to the requirements, and there was ripple after ripple of applause as the horses were speeded around the arena until the spokes in the wheels were invisible. At one time Jack Donnelly, who was driving a splendid chestnut gelding, dropped one of his reins, and for an instant it seemed that a smash was imminent, but he quickly gathered it up again, and few people oven swe the incident.

There was no hesitancy on the part of the judges, however, and the biue ribbon was awarded with general satisfaction to Pitter Patter, and the red to Harmony, first and second honors going to the Woodend stables. There were only three entries in the next class, four-in-hand road teams, but their excellence made up for the deficiency in numbers, and the driving of Charles Fownes, who tooled Dr. Woodend's splendid team, evoked more enthusiasm than anything else of the evening, unless it were the winding of the horn by Dr. Woodend's guard. Sidney Manley, the champion horn blower of England, and himself a professional coachman.

The Woodend team was made up of Santos and Shamrock as wheelers, and Eroon Brown and Brown Baron for leaders. The whole team moved as if on springs of steel, and made as splendid a pleture as could be seen. Mr. Fownes is one of the finest whips in the world, and perhaps he never held the ribbons.

JOSEPH W. LAUBE PASSES AWAY

Useful Life of This Well-Known Citizen Ended at 1 o'Clock This Morning.

Mr. Joseph W. Laube, for a number of years one of the best known funeral directors of Richmond, died at 1 o'clock this morning at his residence No. 17 East Clay Street.

Deceased had been in falling health for a year or more, and for the past few days has been at the point of death. The end was momentarily expected all day yesterday.

Joseph W. Laube was a native of this city, and was born Pebruary 10, 1851. His father was Francis Laube, who established the undertaking business here, afterwards conducted by the Laube, and was known for his mitegrity and fine business qualities.

The subject of this sketch grew up to young manhood, trained for the business he was afterwards to assume, and Laube was a man of quiet demeanor and while he could not have been called a mixer, yet those who knew him found much in his sturdy make-up to admire.

JOSEPH W. LAUBE

and they found him as true as steel at all times.

Mr. Laube's only public career was as a member of the Board of Police Commissioners from Monroe Ward, and he filled this position in a most admirable manner for nearly twelve years.

He retired of his own volition about a year ago, owing to failing health, and could have been re-elected indefinitely had it been his wish.

Until his health gave way he was prominent in the Grand Lodge of Elks, and was a leader in all the Catholic societies here. About six months ago Mr. Laube retired from active business, and was succeeded in his undertaking establishment by a nephew, Mr. J. M. Kain.

Mr. Laube was never married. He leaves three siterish as follows: Mrs. John Lonard, of New York; Mrs. John Kain, of this city, and Mrs. R. S. Griffin, of Washington, D. C.
